Abstract: The abstract structure consists of a single paragraph, containing up to 250 words, Times New Roman font, size 11 - single spacing between lines, justified. The abstract text must represent the content of the research, covering the paper proposal, objectives, theoretical foundation/discussion, methodological procedures and main results. It should not include bibliographic references. The verb must be used in the active voice and in the third person singular (ABNT - NBR 6028).

Keywords: Word(s) that represent(s) the content of the document and chosen from controlled vocabulary. Insert a maximum of five (5), written in lowercase letters (except in case of first names or abbreviations), written in the language of the text, separated by a semicolon and with a period after the last one.

1 INTRODUCTION (titles and subtitles are at the discretion of the author(s) – only when applicable)

The introduction is a logical argumentative work that validates the need to carry out the study. This is an initial part of the article in which the author(s), normally, establish(es) a delimitation of the subject addressed, considering other research already carried out, and presenting objectives, justification and other elements necessary to situate the theme addressed in the proposal.

Research does not start from scratch, so it is important that the researcher does a prior study of what has already been written about the subject he will address. Even if it is an unprecedented field research, which evaluates a concrete, unknown situation in a given location, someone or a group, somewhere, must have already carried out similar research(es), or even complementary research(es) to certain aspects of the intended. The search for such sources, whether documentary or bibliographic, becomes essential so that there is no duplication of efforts.

In this space, you can present many topics.

2 METHODOLOGICAL PROCESSES or MATERIALS AND METHODS (at the discretion of the author)

In this item, it is recommended to detail the procedures involved in developing the paper, in order to ensure that readers are able to correctly interpret the results or use the information to reproduce the study. Only the methodologies that will support the results and conclusions are presented. In some cases, this section may be subdivided into topics in order to facilitate reading and identification of specific methodological aspects of the work in question.

4 RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

Item of fundamental importance in/for the paper, because it will guide the discussion, and may even be one of the first parts to be read by the reader. Therefore, the presentation should emphasize the most important aspects of the data collected, corresponding to those that will be referenced and commented on in the discussion. However, special attention should be paid to the rules for presenting tables and illustrated illustrations (drawings, diagrams, flowcharts, photographs, graphs, maps, organizational charts, plans, tables, portraits and others).

5 CONCLUSION & PERSPECTIVES

Final part of the article, in which the conclusions corresponding to the objectives and hypotheses are presented. Conclusions should be brief, synthetically recapitulating the results of the research carried out. This is not always the final answer to a problem. This way, it is possible to present new research proposals around the topic studied.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Acknowledgments and credits to financing institutions must appear at the end of the text and before the References item.
